

WHAT WE'VE DONE

2017 in Review

AFIMSC was in its infancy when Maj. Gen. Bradley Spacy took command on July 22, 2016. Under his leadership, AFIMSC focused on executing specific responsibilities and seeking new opportunities to innovate and transform the way we deliver I&MS programs to the Air Force. The center has maintained focus on meeting the Air Force's primary goals while executing more than 150 I&MS capabilities.

"We have the best of the Major Commands combined with the best of the field operating agencies; together they provide an enterprise-wide view the Air Force never had before."

Maj. Gen. Bradley D. Spacy
AFIMSC Commander

These goals are at the forefront of the entire lifecycle of AFIMSC's I&MS capabilities – from planning and programming to budgeting and execution.

Accomplishing these goals and tackling future challenges require new and innovative approaches.

AFIMSC Warfighters have supported every stage of Air Force readiness, from training to deployment to post-deployment activities. This support included:

Building ready and resilient Warfighters remains integral to achieving our goals. To that end, AFIMSC pursued:

- Restoring expeditionary readiness and enhancing lethality Page 14
- Providing extensive support for natural disasters at home Page 15
- Constructing and renovating state-of-the-art, efficient facilities Page 17
- Ensuring faster, safer installation access for authorized individuals Page 18
- Enhancing effectiveness of small arms training ranges Page 19

- Providing trailblazing programs such as Air Force Alpha Warrior. Page 36
- Centralizing and standardizing training opportunities Page 37
- Enhancing spiritual support through chaplain services Page 38
- Ensuring quality housing for Airmen and their families Page 39

Emphasis on innovation is critical to continue improving support delivery methods and opportunities. In 2017, AFIMSC concentrated on:

True to its core function, AFIMSC also focused on making installation and mission support more efficient. This included:

- Building the first enterprise-wide I&MS execution plan Page 26
- Establishing enterprise-wide acquisition strategies Page 27
- Providing economic and business case analyses Page 27
- Establishing the first three-year integrated priority list Page 30

- Transforming the organization to better deliver capabilitiesPage 42
- Enhancing the Installation Health Assessment dashboard Page 44
- Delivering AF-wide support agreements Page 46
- Leading the first I&MS Weapons and Tactics Conference Page 47
- Hosting a Mission Support Leadership Summit Page 48
